

This is the first of a series of three, reporting in full the speech by Mr. Leonard W. Brockington, K.C., well-known Ottawa lawyer, who addressed nearly 700 persons gathered in the Royal York Hotel in Toronto to attend a dinner of the Massey-Harris Company Limited, world-wide farm machinery manufacturers, which this year marks its centennial, and was born under the inventive genius of the Massey and Harris families in the days when Ontario was still called Upper Canada—twenty years before the Commonwealth's senior Dominion reached nationhood. Mr. Brockington in his speech traced the development and progress in the manufacture of farm implements in Canada.

Contrasts Between British And Canadian Methods Of Farming

Despite most of the farms are run by the owners and not in a position to modernize their buildings and so they just carry on the hard way, year after year. The buildings are quite different from those in Canada as most of the hay and grain are fed in stacks or covered stacks, requiring much more labor than that common in our country.

A great many tractors are used for plowing and cultivating but the majority of farmers still stick to the old horse cart for hauling grain and for drawing out the manure, the Canadian village noted. Thrashing machines are still fed by hand, and without a straw blower.

There is no increase, but needed machines must be delivered for a year or more.

They use no chemical fertilizers, but do so and use manure crops," reported the Canadian people. "We might learn something in that respect. The Old Country is still the fountain-head for so many of our people are concerned, but we suspect them

Then, with the backing of his bank, he got to work on the order.

SPONSORED BY YOUR CHARTERED BANK

to Toronto. All in all, it looks very much as though the seller's market is coming to an end.

That the retail merchant is not altogether to blame, is evident by the action of individual firms in both east and west. A Canadian Press survey showed a dealer in Charlotteville lowering prices as much as 20 per cent, while 10 per cent reductions were offered in stores so widely separated as Vancouver and Ottawa.

A more striking illustration is an advertisement by a prominent Edmonton store which, under a message to customers, headlines: "Prices are too high." "We have cut buying," and incidentally remarks: "We know that a working man cannot afford to pay up to $4.00 for a pair of overalls."

The steel-general manager of the Dominion Bank of Canada is reported to have added his condemnation, when commenting on the price situation, by stating that the "Level of prices for consumer goods is dangerously high, and unless there is co-operation among all concerned government, industry and labor, we are going to strike a lot of buyer resistance."

To the cynic, it may seem as though the key to the question of lower prices lies in the latter part of the above statement. So far as the government is concerned, it may be noted that the Excess Profits Tax remains until December 31, 1947, and although income tax reductions will affect both industry and labor, it is unlikely the latter will be inclined to forgo demands for increased wages and shorter hours so long as the upsurge of prices continues.

One commentator declares: "The present trouble in Canada is that we have neither control or free enterprise. We have the disadvantages of both and the advantages of neither." On this point we are disposed to agree with Mr. Abbott, the finance minister, who is stated to stand firmly on the position that the only ultimately sound adjustment of prices cannot be achieved by operation of the law of supply and demand, "which never had been proved wrong."

Yet, whatever ends may be achieved, either by buyers' strikes or co-operation in industry, there is much truth in the conclusion of an editorial of the Edmonton Bulletin that: "The general leveling-off may have to be at a higher price level than obtained in pre-war days. The consumer cannot overlook that fact."

So much should be obvious to anyone. There can be no return to the early years of the century. The cry of being worse off today than in the "good old times," is ignoring the circumstance that we have a greatly improved and higher standard of living and comfort than was even thought possible in the "good old times." This must be paid for, and there can be few who would really prefer to return to the oil lamp and kerosene lamp of the past.

WILL YOU PAY THIS PRICE FOR BREAD?

FOOD HAS BECOME AN IDEOLOGICAL WEAPON. In many homes men have said their freedom for bread. Because their stomachs crave food they have accepted ideas which their hearts and minds reject. The power to withhold or supply food has become a mainstay of totalitarian governments.

Millions of bewildered men and women ask why in the era of greatest productivity in man's history they can buy no food.

The answer is that man's first material need is being used to entice him. Men fear and greed have led to starvation and waste through the centuries, but today their exploitation by organized forces has vastly increased famine and overabundance.

"This state of affairs neither man nor, nor God intended. Frank Buchanan says: 'When men and nations learn to care enough and share enough, everyone will have enough.'"

However, that truth has been allowed to operate, the abundance of God's creation has been robbed. FARMERS who have put care of their land before profits have earned both profits for themselves and plenty for their country. MANUFACTURERS who have worked for the proper feeding of the public have prospered and made money for industry. RETAILERS who have fought for honesty and just distrib-tion have gained the gratitude of their community. FAMILIES of every class in many far lands have not lapsed to food and care for their neighbors first have found their own hands and mind enough for generous hospitality.

Food is the most few years can be the means of setting neighbor against neighbor, class against class, nation against nation to the violent and of civilization. Or it can be the means of forging lasting links of peace and gratitude between neighbors and nations.

The real choice before us is not security at the price of slavery or abundance at the price of famine. It is between the materialist economy of greed inspired by the spirit of greed and God's economy of abundance inspired by the spirit of give.

New Appointment

ALFRED J. HARRIS has been appointed district inspector and mail agent, Canadian National Railway, with headquarters in Edmonton. Mr. Barker, who succeeds the late Jack Kelly, will have jurisdiction over the entire province of Alberta and Saskatchewan as well as, but not limited to, the following:

With the company since 1911 Mr. Barker has spent his entire career up to now in the passenger traffic department, Winnipeg.

Miss Evelyn Grant, R.N., superintendent of Bentley Municipal Hospital, is visiting in Delia, having come home by reason of the illness of her mother.

The weather has been dry during the past week, with raw, cold winds prevailing. A light frost occurred in the early hours of Friday last, following a sharp drop in temperature.

Mrs. Robt. Stinson was taken to the Drumbeller Hospital on Thursday of last week, where she underwent an operation. It is reported that she is progressing satisfactorily.

I wish to thank my many friends for the lovely flowers, cards and letters, received during my recent illness. Your good wishes were much appreciated.
